The carried of the finest assorted wall by his wife about four months later. She at once went to Mr. Howard's bouse. A short time afterwards Mrs. Everett and Howard were found together in the former's bedroom, and their intimacy increased each day. The lady some time afterwards informed her husband that she belonged to another and would never live with him again. She then continued to live with Howard from that time until this, being often introduced as his sister.

Mr. Everett, the injured husband, was the first witness called. The old gentleman was naturally much worked up and told his story in a straightforward manner. His evidence was in accordance with the opening statement of the counsel and had considerable effect on the jury. The witness was anxious to tell what he knew, and several times the court had much difficulty in restraining him. On cross-examination, when asked whether he had over threatened his wife's life, he rapifed: "No, sir; it is a lie, and you know it is." The court only quieted him by threatening to give him a term in the penitentiary for contempt. Mr. Everett said that previous to the scame of Howard, his home had always been a most happy one.

the shape of Howard, his home had always been a most happy one.

Alice Everett, the pretty fifteen-year-old daughter of the husband by a previous wife, was called. The child stated that she came from England with her stepmonther, Mrs. Everett, and during the first few months they lived in Ogden. Howard came to their bouse during Mr. Everett's absence in Salt Lake three or four times a week, always staying over night. One night when she returned from being out with some companions she saw Mrs. Evereting mest lovingly. Alice said she would tell her father and the woman replied she did not cars. On another occasion early in the morning she found Howard in Mrs. Everett's room, and when she tried to go in the latter pushed the door shut. Mrs. Everett was half undressed and only house in the city serving breakfast, dinner and supper, other hotels sorving lunch.

The Suspenses, and even written ber desired to go in the latter pushed the door shut. Mirs. Everett was half undressed and only had a skirt on.

Other witnesses were examined who teatified that at different times Howard had procured rooms in different parts of the city and country for Mrs. Everett, and on several occasions he introduced the woman as Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Richards, his sister, to the good people of Mill Creek, and they were often seen walking together at mil times of the day and evan in the night.

The defense placed Mrs. Everett upon the stand and she denied every statement made by the prosecution. Her bold manner of delivery was a surprise to every one, and those who had a morbid desire for something racy hung on her words with suspense. It was brought out in her examination that during her entire absence from her home Howard had paid all bills and expenses, and eften written her at her various lodging places. In October she left Mrs. Bowden's, at Mill Creek, and accompanied by Howard, went to Logan, where she visited the temple. She denied that her co-defendant went into the temple with her, but stayed at the door. On coming their bills, departed for Sait Lake. She complationally denied ever having any criminal intimacy with Howard, and declared that nearly all the testimony introduced by the prosecution was faise. In regard to the various cognomers under which she solled, the witness said abe had taken them to conceal herself from her husband, with whom she could not get along at all.

Howard told normal price of the worth of the witness and the said of the day specified Heach, were at the Walker yesterday.

Howard told nearly the same story as Mrs. Everett, and declared that the latter's husband made life so miserable for her as to make it impossible for her to remain longer with him. He furnished the necessary capital for the woman's support during her stay in Sait Lake. When asked by his counsel if he had over been criminally intimate with Mrs. Everett, he fluffed up and yelled:

and over been criminally intimate with Mrs. Everett, he fluffed up and yelled:

"No, air; of course not. What the davil do you mean, sir!"

The Court—"Silence, sir, or I will be obliged to commit you."

Howard crawled into his shell and subsided. During Everett's examination he said that on one of his visits to his wife he had seen Howard crawl under the bed, leaving his cost, hat and west in the room. Mr. Hamilton asked his client if the statement was correct, and he emphatically defined it, as he also did regarding the little girl's testimony of his being in Mrs. Everett's room and having her sit on his lap.

When Mr. Stephens took the witness in hand the latter made quite a little speech on religion, and declared that although he had been at one time a polygamist, after hand the latter made quite a little speech on religion, and declared that although he had been at one time a polygamist, after the Edmunds law went into effect he had decided to give up the relation forever. When asked regarding the defrayment of Mrs. Everett's expenses, he replied:

"Yes, sir: I did give her money, and the reason for so doing is because I feel confident that the same blood which flows in my veins also flows through hers. I have letters to prove this fact, and when I told Everett so he said 'sister and be damned'."

Howard denied having married the woman, and said his relationship was simply that of a friend and not a lover. During his examination by Mr. Stephens considerable attention was paid to the alleged blood relationship between the two defendants, and Mr. Hamilton, jumping to his feet, asked the court to rule all evidence of this class out of order, as it would only throw a cloud over the birth of Mrs. Everett, who is claimed to be a sister of Howard. The court decided that private family matters should not be delved into. The story certainly had a most romantic character.

The court in his charge said it was not necessary that the circumstances of adultery should be proven by eyewitnesses, but that circumstantial evidence might be taken into consideration, also the manner of delivery of the various witnesses, their deportment and evident interest in the outcome of the case.

IN THE LAW'S CLUTCHES.

The Alleged Forger is Escorted Back to Denver by Captain Parker.

The police are to be congratulated on the clever capture of two alleged forgers or embezziers yesterday morning, as men-tioned in THE HERALD.

When E. M. Hall alias J. M. Stanley and ant cases were disposed of. wife landed from the through Rio Grande Western express they met a most cordial reception committee in the presence of Detectives Glenn and Daggett, who had been detailed by Chief Young to look up the people in response to a telegram from Denver, the charge being forgery and embezzlement. They were escorted to the city all where they languished in the cooler until yesterday forenoon, when they were shipped off to Denver. Of course they de-nied any knowledge of any criminal pro-ceedings, but about 6 o'clock Hall sent for the marshal and told him he was the wanted, and he also gave an alleged his-tory of the entire business.

"I'm a representative of the Gossip Publishing company, publishers of the new satirical journal," said he, "and there's some mistake about the whole proceeding.
"When I left Chicago it was for the pur-pose of introducing the paper and to nay some mistake about the whole proceeding.

"When I left Chicago it was for the purpose of introducing the paper and to pay my way was handed checks over the corporate name of the company and signed by E. C. Brown, a brother-in-law and cashier of the concern. I reached Kansas City and cashed paper there to the amount of $1,100. I found out a few days later that the checks had been balked in Chicago, and on reaching Denver deposited checks for $1,500 and drew on them for $1,100 which I sent to Kansas City to square the paper at that place. The checks went into Chicago and a telegram came back announcing the the total absence of funds. This is my story. Brown, the cashier, must be responsible for it. I have a wealthy uncle in California and Intended getting enough money to square the entire sum defaulted in Denver, but alas for human plans here we are in this cell and I guess hare we will remain some little time."

Upon being searched, the ciothes of Hall disclosed $35, while the woman had something over $700.

On their persons were found letters and photographs from and of Harrison, Rusk, Edmunds, Blaine and other prominent gentlemen who are purported to be interested in the Gosep, the new satirical sheet organized for campaign purposes during the last election. The couple were of the goody goody sort and were liashing diamonds and line linen.

AMUSEMENTS.

"THE BLACK MANTLES,"

Salt Lake experienced a genuine and very pleasant surprise last evening. The theatre was well filled with people who came out more to "encourage" the young company from the north than from any ex pectation of being entertained by it, and when, instead of being pleasantly bored, as doubtless many of them expected to be, they found themselves demanding calls, encoring solos, duets and quartettes, and in encoring soles, duets and quartettes, and in every other way acting quite as they are went to do en professional occasions, it is not too much to say that the night was an astonisher. People who have histerto only heard of Logan as the temple city had their eyes opened for the first time last night to a real sense of her enterprise and import-ance. She ranks fourth in the list of Utah cities in population, but she averaged. Coincy, III.; S.C Bowens and wife, Charles M
